INTERACTIVE CIVIC EXHIBITION EXPERIENCE

You're a citizen. Now what?

A five-question experience for exhibition visitors. It finds the civic instinct you reach for first, opens that room, and leads from culture to real organisations you can join in Ghana and West Africa.

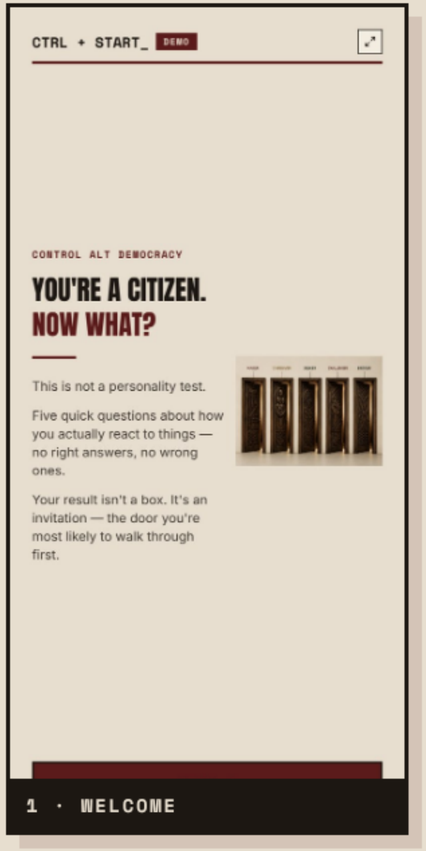

HOW IT PLAYS

FIVE SCENARIOS. ONE DOOR.

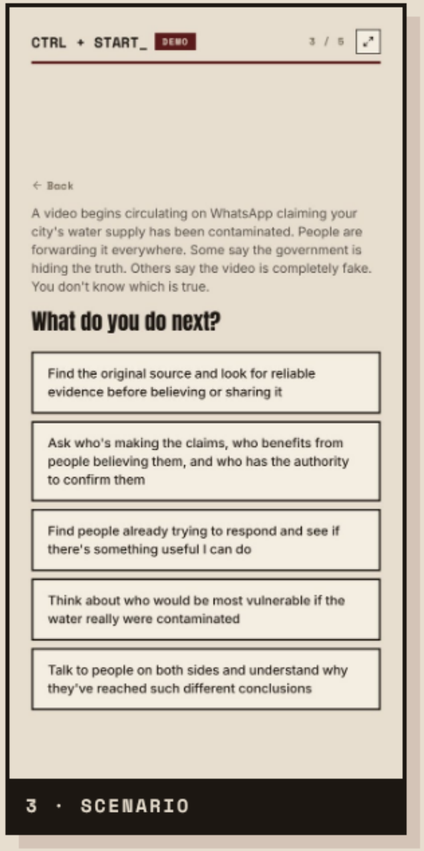

Everyday situations, not a test.

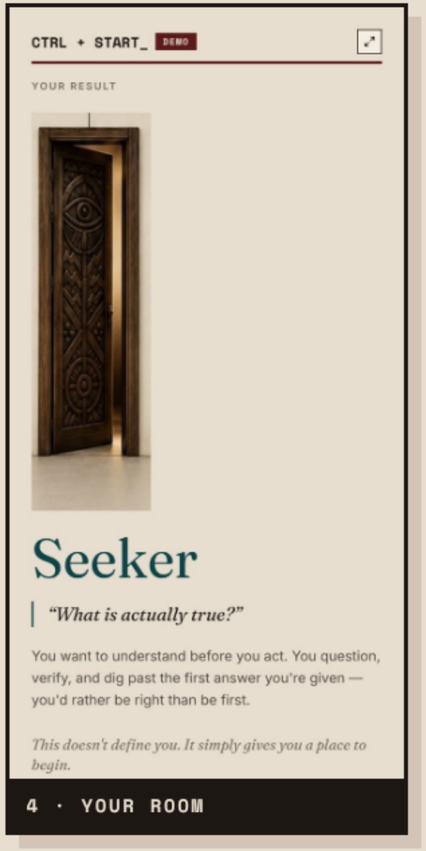

Each scenario asks what you would do or want to understand first. Every answer points to one of five civic instincts. There are no right answers.

- Scenarios range from an unlit building entrance to a WhatsApp rumour about contaminated water
- Answer order is reshuffled every play so position never hints at a result

THE FRAMEWORK

FIVE ROOMS

Five ways of seeing the world.

Build, care, verify, challenge, connect. Everyone carries all five. The experience shows which one is closest to the surface right now, then invites you to visit the others.

YOUR RESULT

Maker

"What can we do?"

You turn ideas into action. You build, organise, and initiate — you're the one who starts moving before everyone else has finished talking.

This doesn't define you. It simply gives you a place to begin.

MAKER

YOUR RESULT

Caregiver

"Who is being affected?"

You notice people first. Who's included, who's left out, who's carrying the weight of a decision — you see the human cost before anyone names it.

This doesn't define you. It simply gives you a place to begin.

CAREGIVER

YOUR RESULT

Seeker

"What is actually true?"

You want to understand before you act. You question, verify, and dig past the first answer you're given — you'd rather be right than be first.

This doesn't define you. It simply gives you a place to begin.

SEEKER

YOUR RESULT

Challenger

"Why is this allowed?"

You push on things that don't hold up. You question authority, name what's unfair, and ask who benefits from things staying the way they are.

This doesn't define you. It simply gives you a place to begin.

CHALLENGER

YOUR RESULT

Bridger

"How do we move forward together?"

You connect people who don't naturally talk to each other. You listen, mediate, and find the common ground everyone else missed.

This doesn't define you. It simply gives you a place to begin.

BRIDGER

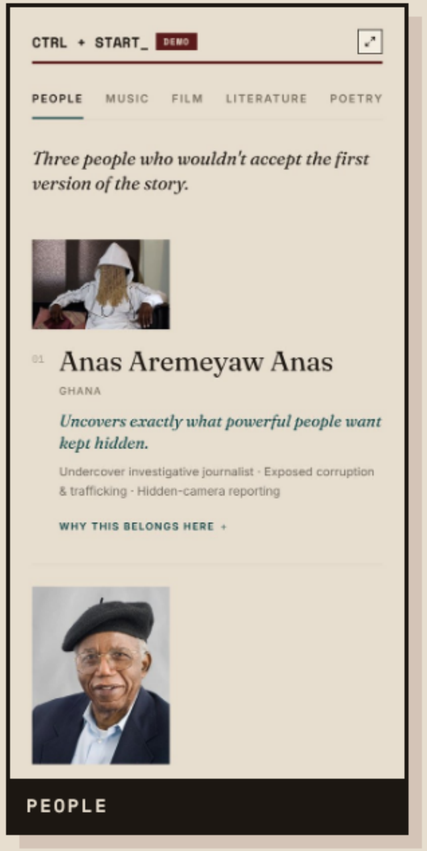

INSIDE A ROOM

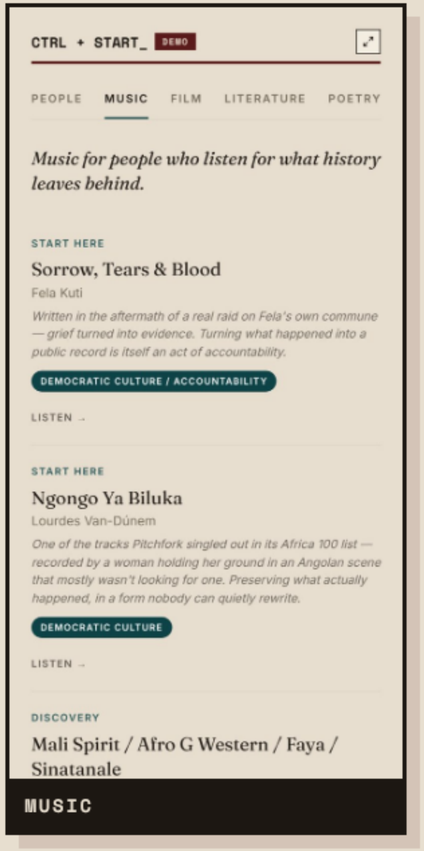

A GUIDE, NOT A SCORE

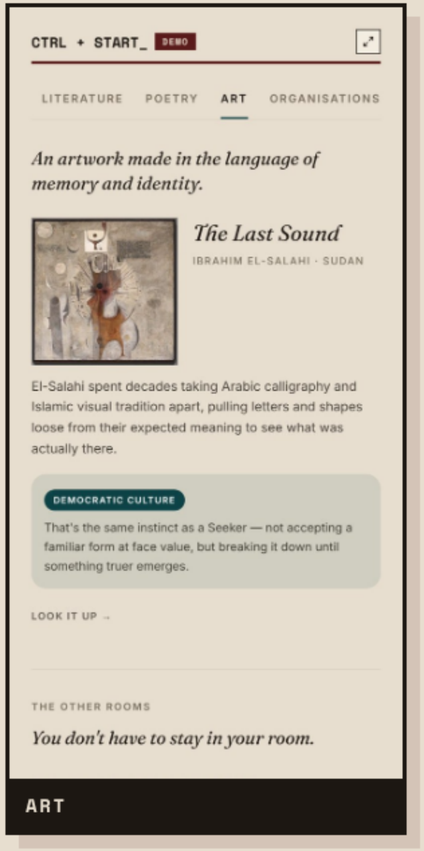

Seven tabs per room, each tied back to the charter.

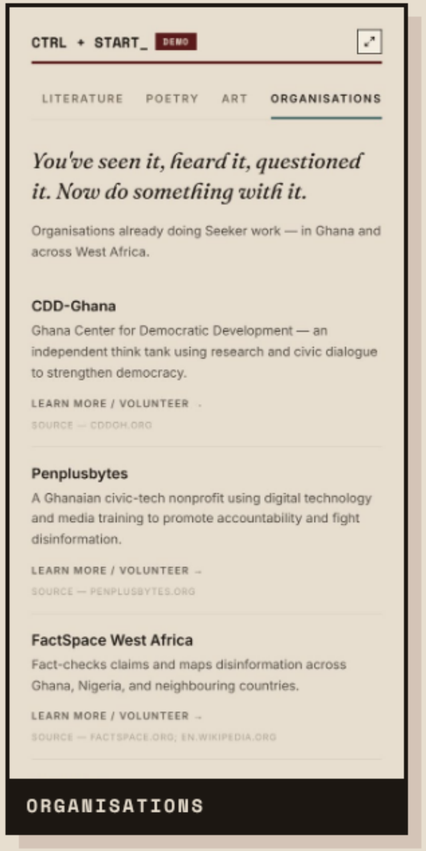

Each room is a curated guide: people, music, film, literature, poetry, art and organisations. Every entry explains how it connects to the African Charter on Democracy, Elections and Governance.

- 15 profiles, 17 music entries, 7 films, 5 books, 5 poems, 5 artworks, 28 organisations each with a source
- Copyrighted poems show an excerpt only; public-domain poems show full text

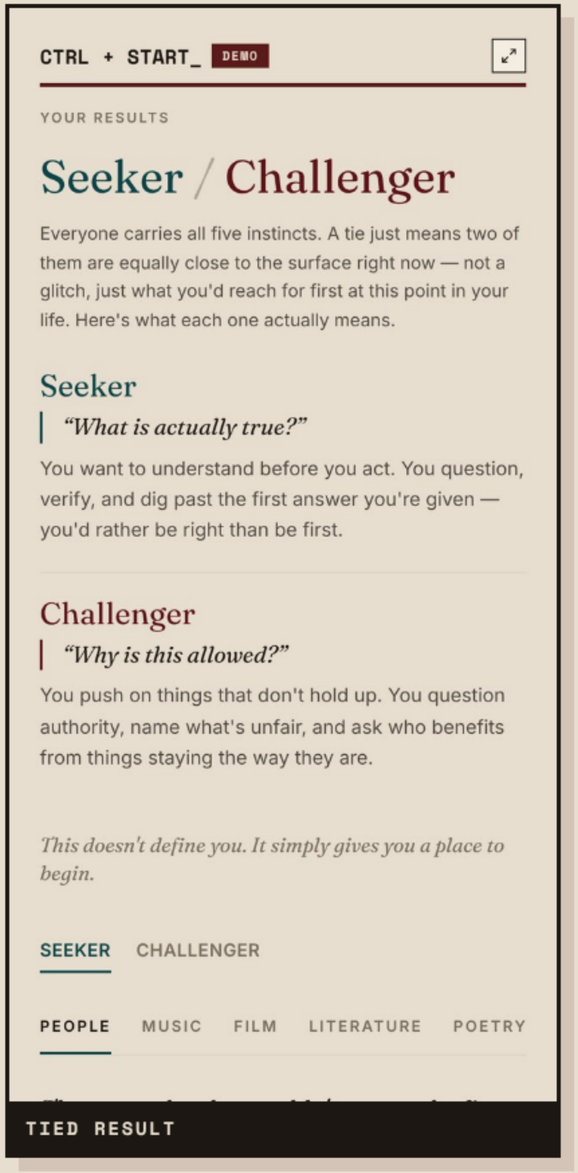

DESIGNED FOR REAL BEHAVIOUR

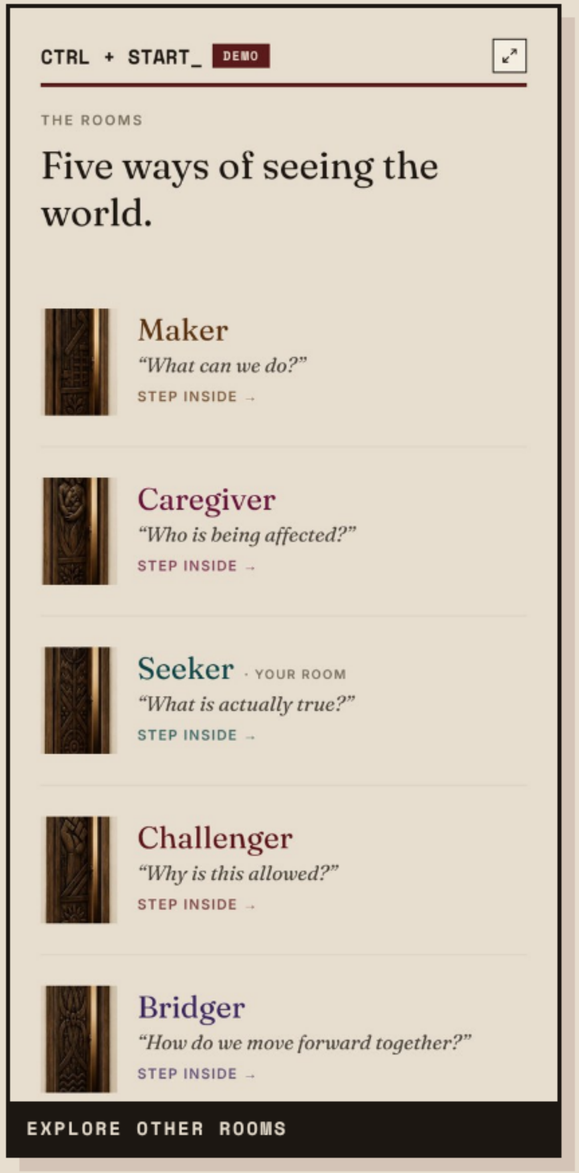

TIES ARE PART OF THE DESIGN

If two instincts score equally, you get both rooms.

With five questions and five instincts, ties are common. The result shows every tied room with an explanation: a tie means two instincts are equally close to the surface, not a glitch.

- The Other Rooms gallery lets visitors walk through any room, not just their own
- Fullscreen mode and an automatic reset after 5 minutes on the result screen suit a shared exhibition screen

THE SYSTEM

FIVE INSTINCTS, FIVE DOORS

Each room has its own guiding question, colour and door. The same structure repeats in every room, so the framework can be reused with other charters, countries or institutions.

Maker

“What can we do?”

Turns ideas into action. Starts moving before everyone has finished talking.

Caregiver

“Who is being affected?”

Notices who is included, who is left out, who carries the weight.

Seeker

“What is actually true?”

Wants to understand before acting. Questions and verifies.

Challenger

“Why is this allowed?”

Pushes on what does not hold up. Asks who benefits.

Bridger

“How do we move forward together?”

Connects people who do not naturally talk to each other.

An interactive experience for exhibition visitors. Visitors answer five short everyday scenarios. The answers show which of five civic instincts they reach for first: Maker, Caregiver, Seeker, Challenger or Bridger.
Each instinct opens a room with people, music, film, books, poetry, art and real organisations in Ghana and West Africa to explore and join.
